

Description

Lima, Peru: In our continuous endeavor to assist international researchers, Enago in collaboration with Universidad de Lima successfully conducted a two-day workshop. Given the success of our previous sessions in Peru, these sessions were exclusively arranged for highly-qualified faculty members and experienced researchers of Universidad de Lima. The sessions focused on issues related to manuscript submissions, overcoming journal rejection, identifying relevant journals for publication, and

Dr.

Klaus Mehlreter (Publication and Training Consultant, Enago Academy) discussed essential points such as pre-submission enquiries, adherence to journal's requirements, research ethics, understanding the aims and scope of journals, as well as expectations of international journals. Based on his personal experiences, Dr. Mehlreter also gave practical advice on networking, improving visibility through conferences, and addressing challenges of presenting in front of large audiences.

About Enago' author workshops, María Luisa De La Rocha, Editor at the Scientific Research Institute, Universidad de Lima mentioned, "Thank you very much Enago for your presence and support in the accomplishment of this workshop at the campus of Universidad de Lima. We truly believe that conducting such workshops for our advanced researchers will help them in not only expanding their knowledge but also gaining more confidence when delivering presentations in international conferences. We found Enago's speaker to be very professional, displaying good command over the subject in various aspects: as a researcher, author, editor, and reviewer. Moreover, he presented the seemingly dull topics in an interesting and comprehensive manner."
