About the Session

In the era of digital innovation, the academic publishing industry has been constantly evolving to meet the requirements of the academic community, funding agencies, policymakers, and the society in general. Moreover, academic journals are becoming part of mainstream information systems with the advent of a globalized movement for open access, changing methods of communication between researchers, and increasing need of publishing in journals that have a large audience.

The objective of our presentation is to show how journals and authors can make some simple changes in their approach and practices as well as improve the overall quality of scientific research and publication, thereby improving the indexing standards of Russian journals—in other words, the Russian research impact.
