Description

This presentation is primarily targeted toward researchers who wish to submit their papers to top-notch international journals but face difficulty with the correct usage of language and grammar. In a system where experts from respective fields need to assess the validity, significance, and originality of the described work, it is imperative that the language quality of the articles submitted to such journals is good to avoid rejection at the peer review stage. Unfortunately, many papers that do not satisfy internationally accepted language requirements are rejected by the journal editors themselves and do not even reach the stage of peer review.

After going through this presentation, you will have more information about the following:

- Awareness of publishing papers in English and structuring of academic papers
- Importance of literature review and structuring of reference lists
- Importance of providing pointers while writing content and effectively using academic English in your papers
- Preparing your paper for publication and journal selection
- Discussion about the manuscript submission process
