

Description

London, UK: Quacquarelli Symonds (QS) today announced their partnership with Enago, a leading author service provider that specifically caters to a large section of the global research community for whom English is a second language (ESL).

QS was founded in 1990 and has established itself as a leading global provider of specialist higher education and career information and solutions. QS activities span across 50 countries, working with over 2000 of the world's leading higher education institutions. Enago is the trusted name in author services for the global research community. Since 2005, Enago has worked with 100,000+ researchers in 125+ countries improving the communication of their research and helping them to achieve success in international publication. Enago is the preferred partner for leading academic publishers, societies, and universities worldwide. Enago has offices in Tokyo, Seoul, Beijing, Shanghai, Istanbul, and New York and operates globally with regional teams supporting researchers locally.

"QS have always advised higher education institutions to improve their international research output as part of overall globalization and we are pleased to now offer comprehensive support by partnering with Enago," commented Jason Newman, Global Commercial Director, QS Intelligence Unit. "We encourage the importance of publishing cutting-edge research and opinions from across the globe, and are happy that we are now able to increase our support for our partner universities."

"Enago is delighted to be collaborating with a forward-thinking organization like QS to improve universities' research output," said Rajiv Shirke, VP Global Operations, Enago. "Having easy access to the manuscript editing services provided by Enago will not only accelerate the process of publishing high-impact research but also ensure that specific author needs are taken care of during the editorial process."
