Academic conferences have long been an effective means of research promotion. They are not only a great platform to showcase the latest findings and network with research professionals globally but also a useful forum for researchers to perceive state-of-the-art knowledge from experts in the field. Lately, virtual conferences have been gaining immense popularity and are gradually becoming a norm. Also, it has become essential for researchers to adapt to this new format to target the audience impressively and communicate crucial aspects of their research work convincingly. This webinar will aim to prepare researchers for successfully delivering a striking presentation and help them overcome the most pressing challenges with virtual sessions.

Through this session, researchers will increase their awareness about:

- How to identify the right conference
- How to overcome common challenges while presenting virtually
- Effective tips to design impressive and authoritative video presentations
- How to be a better scientific presenter and keep your audience engaged
- How to handle Q&A professionally
- Tips for successful networking
