Enago in collaboration with IntechOpen, the world's leading publisher of Open Access books conducted an informative webinar to provide authors with the necessary guidelines for drafting and submitting effective book proposals. Submitting a compelling, formal, thoroughly researched, and well-written book proposal to the right academic press is a key to make the best first impression on publishers. In continuation of our first session on academic book writing and publishing, this session provided authors with useful tips to draft an exceptional book proposal and convince the publishers that their book is an excellent piece of work for scholarly consumption. It also explained the significance and benefits of publishing an open access book.

Through this session, researchers will have an improved understanding of the following:

1. Elements of a book proposal and writing tips
2. How to find the right publisher for your book/book chapter
3. Submission guidelines for a book proposal
4. Insights into Open access book publishing – By IntechOpen
5. Proposal guidelines and Submission tips for Authors – By IntechOpen

About IntechOpen (<https://www.intechopen.com/>)

IntechOpen is the world's leading publisher of Open Access books founded in the year 2004 to provide a collaborative environment for peer-reviewed content and book publishing of academic research. It is a scientific community comprising of 116,000 authors and academic editors, and a publisher of 4000 open access books. Since 2015, IntechOpen has been a purely Open Access book publisher and believes that publication in Open Access books is as effective, as fast and as valuable as publication in journals. Intech Open's digital workflow straddles the traditional boundaries between journals and books.
